

How to Contact Cultural Linguistic Services during the COVID-19 Pandemic

Given the concerns around COVID-19, Cultural Linguistic Services (CLS) will continue providing services, primarily through telecommuting, and will be responding to emails in regards to services needed at this time.

The interpreters and translators' team are identified as essential when working with essential positions, and for communication. If you have CLS needs, please take the following into account:

- Whether or not in-person trainings or meetings are essential and necessary. If so, interpreters will be present to provide the service.
- For all other individual meetings and consultation, CLS would like to use WebEx, phone, or Microsoft Teams.
- Translation services are still available; however, keep in mind they will be focusing on urgent campus communications.

Workplace English Classes have been cancelled until further notice. The English Language Learning team is working on developing future curriculum, lessons and trainings. Some of our trainings will be offered online in the near future.

Please continue to contact Laurie Teeter for your group-interpretation needs so that she can coordinate with CLS.
